

with your income now would you [REDACTED]?

You will also see Dr. Kawesch advertised there too! Naw, not that one, but his brother. Just click the ad on LasikDisaster.com and you are at the website of "Northern California's expert" in refractive surgery. Aww [REDACTED], it is swell of you to let LasikDisaster.com visitors know who is Northern California's expert.

Not to be outdone by Lasik Vision Institute, [REDACTED] are making money off of Lasik Plus too. Learn all about their "state of the art technology & facilities". I guess [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] were just kidding all those times they derided "Lasik Mills".

And look at THIS: [REDACTED] even accept advertising from a CRSQA Certified Refractive Surgeon on LasikDisaster.com. Maybe our organization should buy an ad on LasikDisaster.com, since it is obviously for sale. I had better first look at that all important Return On Investment (ROI) that has [REDACTED] so concerned in regard to CRSQA certification.

So tell us [REDACTED], come clean [REDACTED]; how much are you making on selling ad space for Lasik? Hundreds? Thousands? Tens of thousands? How much does this income influence who you vilify and who you ignore? Gosh [REDACTED] what are you going to do if Dr. Maloney buys an ad on LasikDisaster.com? Perhaps Dr. Hawley should sign up too. Good grief, [REDACTED], what are you going to do if CRSQA buys an ad on LasikDisaster.com?

It looks like that sanctimonious "I don't make anything off of Lasik" line is the window.

Bottom line: [REDACTED] will sell their integrity for the few shekels an ad on LasikDisaster.com will bring in. Excuse my bluntness, but the term that comes to my mind rhymes with "boars".

Shame on you [REDACTED]. Shame, shame, shame.
